

Notes from HTML Review

Home page

- Responsive: “book of john” and the quote remained legible and no weird scaling
 - o Make sure to work on how the menu bar will respond to the different sizes

“Background” page

- Background image: image could be toned down either through playing around with transparency
 - o possibly increase size of the image so that the majority of the text can be in the sky, where it is lighter, therefore making the the black text more legible
- text
 - o if background image is not going to change, consider making the text a very light color
 - o increase bottom margin

other pages

- consider making common questions and analysis pages interactive but still minimalistic
- common questions
 - o click on questions to show answer?
 - o Only questions page? Only answer page?
 - o Answer pop out from the side or bottom when question clicked?
- Think about how to utilize space for these two pages since these will have a lot more text than the background page
- With more text design elements might help organize the information
 - o Try using simple lines, or color for differentiation

Try to also include a link to an online bible website at the end for viewers who might actually want to read the bible in full context.
